Amion.

"LIBERTY, THE UNION, AND THE CONSTITUTION." VOLUME VI.

CITY OF WASHINGTON, SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 12, 1850,

CONGRESSIONAL. SPEECH OF MR. BRADBURY,

The hannels among in the about my street of the property of th off upon them the men whom he am the form office.

On the expiration of Mr. Tyler's term, Mr. Polk assumed the reins of government; and so far from proscribing all the whige he found in the offices, as has been sometimes represented, he practised great liberality. Making some removals deemed necessary to do justice to his friends who constituted a large majority in the country, it is also true that many whigs were retained and many were appointed to office under him. One of the late mode the proscriptive administrations of Jackpon and J